BISHOP OF DALLAS,

Edward J. Dunne Consecrated With Imposing Ceremonies. CH CAGO, Nov. 30.—Rev. Edward J.

Dunne became bishop of Dallas with the imposing ceremonies of Episcopal consecration at All Saints church today. The service was observed in full and was witnessed by an immense audience. Among those officiating were Consecrator Most Rev. P. A. Feehan, Bishop Ryan, of Altoona; Bishop Foley, of Detroit, and many priests and chaplains. Those taking part in the service marched in procession through the church to the sanctuary, the conse crator, accompanied by the various offi-cers of the masses the assistant bishop, with their chaplains, conducting the bishop-elect. The ceremony lasted about two hours, and at its conclusion an elaborate banquet, the rift of the priests of the diocese, was tendered to Bishop Dunne, Archbishop Feehan and the other prelates and clergy in the school hall. Bishop Dunne will not leave for his new charge until about the middle of January.

A RACE QUESTION.

White Variety Actors Making War on the Colored Artists.

SAN FRANCISCO. CAL, Nov. 30 .- The white performers on the variety stage in San Francisco have drawn the line on people of their own profession who are not of their own color, Over 200 performers, mostly stars of the vaudeville stage, and some few of the "legitimate," met yesterday for the purpose of form-ing a union, the principal object of which will be to bar the genuine black face artist from the same stage as the white man. The trouble which led up to the organization of the union of white performers was a three cornered row between the managers of a local theatre and Charles Hunn, colored comed and Junie McCrae, Irish comedian. colored comedian.

PATTI'S CHILDHOOD.

She Played at Opera Singing in the West chester Village of South Mount Vern

New York Eun. Thirty years before Adelias Patti began to live in a Welsh castle her home was an ugiy, though substantial rectanguiar red brick house in a village of Westchester county. The village has since changed its official name from Washingtonville to South Mount Ver-non, though its sole railway station, on the Harlem division of the New York Central, still retains the former name. The confusion arising from this double system of nomenclature is increased by the fact that the vilings is known to the postoffice department as Wakefield.

postoffice department as Wakefield.

When Patti was a little girl of 10 or thereabouts there was no such confusion as to the identity of the village. It had just been laid out and called Washingtonville, in order to be patriotically even with the neighbbring village of Mount Vernon. The village then, as even yet, although the New York City limits within half a mill of its institueven yet, although the New York City line is within ball a mile of its imits, was thoroughly rural in temper and habits. Farms and old farm home-steads lay all about it, and when the wandering Pattis built their big ualy house they set it upon a slope overlook-ing the Bronx valley, with its back to the White Plains road, now the princi-pal street of South Mount Vernon. pal street of South Mount Vernon. Patti's father brought to his country home his second wife and three sets of children—those to whom the wife was stepmother, those to whom Patti, the kueband, was stepfather, and those to whom the pair were both tather and mother. The variously refather and mother. The variously re-lated parents were already old to the stage, and even the elder children had begun, their life work. Carlotta was singing her earlier songs, and Nicola was already well known on the stage. The Pattis found themselves amid an oddly unsympathetic community. But they came and went with small thought of their neighbors, now going upon long of their neighbors, now going upon long of their neighbors, now going upon long professional tours, now idling at the red brick house. Mme. Patti, the wife, seems to have left an even more vivid impression upon her former neighbors. than Adelina, the daughter. The wife was a somewhat stern, dark-eyed wom-an, who impressed the villagers as a person to be treated with consideration. As to the little Adelina, she is remem As to the little Adelina, she is remembered as a plumb, good-natured little girl with foreign hair, eyes, and complexion. The younger villagers of today say as they pass the Patti house, "Adelina Patti, the great singer, was born there," but the older folk who were local contemporaries of the Pattis know better. Adelina, while living at Vashitatavilla, was, to ache in New Yoshitavavilla, was to ache in New Yoshitavavilla, was the second of the Pattis o know better. Adelina, while living at Washingtonville, went to school in New York; but one of her amusements was to gather the village children into the red brick house and set up a singing school. Another characteristic amusement of Adelina was to play opera, and the Widow Brown, a neighbor of the Pattis, still cherishes the toy theater, made of early which Adelina owned. made of cork, which Adelina owned. This, a few chairs belonging to the widow, and a great kitchen table, are the only relics of Patti left in and about her modern home. According to local tradition Patti, while living in Wash-ingtonville, same in public at Beck's ho-tel in Mount Vernon, and her former neighbors will have it that this was her first public appearance, though the bi-ographers of the diva tell a different story.

The Patti house was sold last year by the man who bought it from the Patits, and it is now occupied in the summer by a German fancier of plants and veg-etables. He has painted the red bricks etables. The has painted the red bricks a light lead color, and has transformed the terraced grass plot into a blooming flower garden. The house now faces an unimportant street, and stands many feet above the sidewalk. Its front door is reached by a high flight of steps leading to a large veranda. Within are a dozen rooms, mostlof them large, but plain. The present owner declares that Father Patti built well, and that the Father Patti built well, and that the house is as sound as a house can be. The surviving members of the Patti family will take an interest in the louse, and Nicola has visited it within eighteen months. The village is stirred periodically when Patti is singing in New York by the rumor that she will revisit the old place.
